The Wyoming Institute for Disabilities (WIND) and the Utah Regional Leadership Education in Neurodevelopmental Disabilities (URLEND) members are surveying the attitudes of developmental disability providers, medical providers, and mental health providers regarding the sexuality of people with intellectual disabilities. The results of the study will help researchers better understand these attitudes within Montana, Utah, Idaho, and Wyoming. The study will assist members of the URLEND program to better understand provider attitudes regarding the expression of sexuality of persons who have ID. This information may provide future direction of work regarding how to best support the sexuality of people with ID. Participants will be entered to win 1 of 10 Amazon gift cards. All survey answers will be kept confidential, and all data will be de-identified and aggregated. To participate, go to the survey on the URLEND website.
